Arrivals at Capital Indicate Interest In Newlands Bill

Public's Interest in Newland Probe is
Question of Government Control
and Ownership of Railroads

INVESTIGATION STARTS NEXT MONDAY

Washington, Nov. 18.—The arrival in the capital of many prominent railroad officials, financiers, economists, and representatives of commercial and industrial organizations throughout the country indicates the widespread interest that is taken in the big railroad investigation under the Newlands resolution, which is to be launched here Monday with the beginning of a series of public hearings to be conducted by the joint subcommittee of Congress appointed for that purpose.

While the joint committee's work will be distinct from that of the special commission, authorized by the Adamson law enacted to prevent the threatened railroad strike, its scope will be broad and any legislation recommended in the report to be made may include questions involved in the controversy between the roads and their employees.

The public importance that attaches to the Newlands probe, however, lies in the fact that it is the first investigation attempted in this country with a view of inquiring into the advisability of government control or government ownership of the railroads and other public utilities. For some time past rumors have been in circulation to the effect that the committee will seize the opportunity to make a thorough investigation of assets and control of the railroads to acquire the properties by purchase or condemnation proceedings.

These rumors have been strengthened by statements and interviews given out by Senator Newlands, head of the committee, who in a recent address in Chicago declared that "if government regulation fails, government ownership of railroads is inevitable. There is no other course open in settling disputes between the big employers and employees in public utilities. Government control or ownership is the question of the hour and must be faced by the people."

According to senator Newlands the plans of the committee with relation to the condition of government ownership will include a consideration of the practical results as to efficiency and economy where actually practiced; whether it is compatible with our system of government; that its effect on our institutions, and whether such a system would suit local needs. A practical method of acquiring the properties and securities of the railroads also will have to be devised, he says.

The principal questions that will confront the sub-committee are:

Whether there shall be absolute government ownership of the railroads as well as of other public utilities, such as telegraph, wireless, cable, telephone and express companies; or

Whether there shall be continued Federal regulation including requirement of Federal incorporation or control of incorporation of railroads, with increased powers given to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

One of the principal arguments against government ownership will be the claim that it will bring into politics the 1,700,000 employees, and that the efficiency of the roads when handled by the government will be less than by private hands. In answer to this the advocates of government ownership will point to the postoffice system as an instance where government control is best.

While the resolution creating the committee calls for a report to Congress on or before the second Monday in January, it is assumed that an extension of time will be granted, and plans have been made for an inquiry that may require nearly two years for its completion.

While no definite decision has been reached, it is expected to hold hearings in the principal cities of the country, as well as in Washington, New York, Chicago, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis, San Francisco, New Orleans and Atlanta. It is not expected, however, that any hearings will be held outside of Washington before the first of the year.

The committee will ask leading economists, publicists, railroad commissions, railroad executives, employes, investors, farmers, shippers, bankers, and representatives of business and industrial organizations to attend these hearings and present their opinions on the important subjects involved in the investigation.

Mr. Sunday has made no special plans for the observance of his birthday tomorrow. He expects to conduct afternoon and evening services in the big tabernacle and will pass the remainder of the day in company with his family and a few intimate friends in the spacious mansion occupied by the evangelist's party in Commonwealth avenue.

Rex Ammerman, Fifteen Years Old,
Is Victim of Football Accident

Rex, the fifteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Ammerman of West Fifth avenue, had a leg broken between the knee and ankle while playing football in the Clearfield Driving Park this morning.

A couple of kid teams were battling the daylight out of the pig skin in an exciting game, with young Ammerman leading the warriors on his side. He was running with the ball and when tackled by one of the opposing players went to the sod with about a dozen struggling kids on top of him. When picked up from the wreck it was found that he had received a bad fracture of the leg and he was at once taken to the Clearfield Hospital where his injury was given medical attention, and he is now getting along finely although forced to miss this afternoon's big game.

HELPED WIN LAST GAME

We are glad to be able to present to our readers the likeness of Walter Flegal, who is so well and favorably known to the majority of Clearfield citizens. Walter left Clearfield over a year ago and after learning to juggle logs in the wilds of Colorado was admitted to Colorado College where he is at present a student of a preparatory course leading to the study of medicine. Incidentally Walter has developed into quite an athlete. The Colorado College Tiger, the regular weekly publication of Colorado College gives the following account of his part in the game against the Colorado Aggies: "Flegal was the most brilliant. In spite of the fact that time was taken out for him two times, he gouged and tore his way through the Farmers' lines and broke up play after play. Receiving the ball on one of the kick offs, he sped down the field shaking off tacklers right and left before he was finally downed."

The returns thus far indicate the election of Charles H. Rowland, R., by a plurality of 168.

Your Sunday School Lesson for Tomorrow

Text of the Lesson, Acts xxviii, 11-31.
Memory Verses, 30, 31—Golden Text,
Rom. i, 16—Commentary Prepared by
Rev. D. M. Stearns.

After carrying three months at Malta another ship from Alexandria, which had wintered in the Isle, was sailing for Italy, and on that they departed and reached Italy in safety, remaining three days at Syracuse and seven days at Puteoli on the way. No doubt the gospel was preached at both places, but at the latter place there were believers, and the fellowship must have been very helpful to all. It would be a great event for the brethren at Puteoli to hear from those who had so recently come from Jerusalem, and to hear Paul tell of his missionary tours and release all that God had done by him and all that he had suffered on his tours at Jerusalem must have thrilled an assembly of believers and inspired them with greater zeal for God and his kingdom.

The brethren at Rome, having heard of Paul's arrival in Italy, came out to meet him as far as Appia forum and the three taverns, and, having welcomed him and encouraged him, they returned to Rome together. I sometimes use this incident as suggestively illustrative of our meeting the Lord in the air and returning with him when He shall come to set up His kingdom. Just the meeting and returning—I have no other thought of any analogy in the incident (verses 11-15). Another handful of purpose seems to have come Paul's way in his being allowed to dwell by himself with a soldier that kept him (verse 16). That soldier must have learned much of Jesus Christ, for as Paul talked to him privately it was like pouring water into a bottle rather than throwing it at a lot of bottles. Our Lord spoke more than once to audiences of one, as in the case of Nicodemus and the woman of Samaria.

Having called the chief of the Jews together, Paul explained to them why he had come to Rome as a prisoner, adding, "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain" (verses 17-20). There is only one person who is called the hope of Israel or the hope of the church, only one in whom there is any hope for either Jew or Gentile, and that is Jesus Christ, the Son of God. His coming for us is our blessed hope, and His coming with us in glory will prove Him to be the hope and Saviour of Israel as a nation (Tit. ii, 13; Isa. xxi, 5; Zech. xii, 10; xiii, 1). The brethren at Rome said that they had never heard anything against Paul, but they would like to hear what he thought of this sect that was everywhere spoken against. A day having been appointed, many came to his lodging, to whom he testified and expounded the Scriptures of Moses and the prophets concerning Jesus and the kingdom of God, from morning till evening (verses 21-23).

As they listened to him some believed, not. They could not agree and had much reasoning among themselves, which led Paul to turn to the gentiles with the good news, quoting to the Jews what the Holy Spirit had said by Isaiah concerning them: "Hearken, O ye heathen, unto the Lord, for he has said, I will send my messengers, and they shall come, and they shall expect opposition and that their message would not be received by many (Jer. i, 17, 19; Ezek. ii and iii, xxxiii, 31). The apostles also were told that they were sent out as sheep in the midst of wolves and might expect to be hated, put out of the synagogue and killed (Matt. x, 16-28; John xv, 20-21; xvi, 1-3). The most that we can aim to do in this age is by all means to save some (1 Cor. ix, 22), for we are nowhere taught that the world will ever be won to Christ until Jesus shall have re-ruled Him at His coming in glory, and then the glory of the Lord shall have risen upon Israel and shall be seen upon the nations, shall come to her light and kings to the brightness of her rising.

Paul continued to preach the kingdom of God and teach those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ for two whole years to all who came to him in his own hired house. There were many believers, even in Caesar's household, and his bonds for Christ were manifest at Caesar's court as well as elsewhere, and many of the brethren in the Lord, walking confident by his bonds, were much more bold to speak the word without fear (Phil. i, 13, 14; margin, v, 22). This book of the Acts begins with the Lord Jesus speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God during the forty days between His resurrection and ascension (Acts i, 3) and ends with the record of Paul's two years' testimony at Rome concerning the same great truth. In connection with our Lord's teaching after He rose from the dead, we need to notice what He talked about on the way to Emmaus and also that same conversation in Jerusalem (Luke xxiv, 44) and observe that both He and Paul used the same text—the Scriptures written by the Holy Spirit through Moses and the prophets, for all Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, brought up to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ (2 Tim. iii, 16; 1 Pet. i, 21).

He also reported the British raid on enemy trenches north of Ypres where a number of machine guns and prisoners were stationed. FORTUNATE THAT FIREMEN WERE NOT NEEDED

Fire Alarm at 9:30 This Morning Due to Burning Fire on

HOSE CART TURNS TURTLE

A burning fire at the home of W. E. Davis on Gulish Ave., was the cause of "old Mooley" sounding the fire alarm at 9:30 this morning, but fortunately the services of the firemen were not needed when they arrived on the scene.

The signal was blown for District 21 and W. E. was mixed up with P. T. Davis with the result that No. 1 Company started up West Front St. toward the latter's residence and had their hose to the plug at West Walnut St. before they learned they were in wrong.

Their hose cart was hitched behind Leitzinger Bros. delivery truck and turned turtle at the turn into West Front street at the end of the bridge but was soon righted and on its way with but very little delay.

Infantile Paralysis At Dimeling Station

Child of Station Agent at N. Y. C.
Station There is Afflicted.

That the freezing weather has not as yet succeeded in stamping out the germs of the dreaded infantile paralysis was demonstrated when physicians were called to attend a sick child in the family of New York Central Station Agent Stover at Erie station, decided after a careful diagnosis that the little one was suffering from infantile paralysis.

The victim is four years of age and has been sick for several days. The attending physician is Dr. Shively, of Woodland, and he notified the local representative of the state board of health, Hon. M. L. McQuinn, that the case was really infantile paralysis and a careful quarantine will be established.

DuBois proposes to have a parade of Republicans tonight in honor of the Republicans carrying that city in the recent election. They may be able to parade but it will be hard to smile.

Brother Bixler is quite hard on Joe Phillips this week. It must be remembered, however, that Joe received the largest vote of any of the candidates and therefore must be the people's choice. The people rule.

The Altoona Tribune says that every time the liquor dealers exclaim that violations of the prohibitory laws are inevitable and extensive, they advertise their own willingness and intention to disregard the law.

So long as the Republicans of DuBois, Clearfield and Okeola and Houtzdale each think they are working under a separate jurisdiction or a separate dispensation, the Republican Party of Clearfield County will be doomed to defeat.

One election is no sooner over than we are pestered with another. Already there are no less than a dozen citizens, good, bad and indifferent who are laying their lines for the office of sheriff. May the saints pity us if we have to take any of those we have heard of so far.

CURWENSVILLE NEWS

Forrest Vaughn was taken suddenly ill while on his way home from work on Wednesday evening.

Harry Leathers, who resides on the Bailey road, has been confined to his home most of the week with a slight illness.

Miss Lea Bloom one of Clearfield county's popular school teachers left yesterday morning for State College to attend Pennsylvania Day.

Miss Ruth Twigg, who spent the past month with friends in Philadelphia, Wilmington, Del., West Chester, and Gettysburg has returned to her home in this place.

The members of St. Timothy Catholic church are arranging for the holding of a big chicken supper in the basement of that edifice on Tuesday evening, December 12th.

Misses Esther Twigg and Mable Leonard have gone to State College where they will spend several days visiting with friends and also take in the sights and scenes of Pennsylvania day.

Paul Harvey leaves for Renovo Sunday. He has been offered a foremanship in a brick yard at that place and is going down to look the ground over and if the situation pleases him will probably accept the proposition made to him.

The entertainment held in the M. E. Church last evening under the auspices of Queen Esther Circle, was a creditable one and all who were present were well pleased and profited by the time spent in listening to the lady who entertained.

Mrs. William Twigg, Sr., has announced that the next Mothers' meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the Presbyterian church on Thursday, November 23rd, at which time "How Much should a Child know before Going to School?" will be a topic discussed. It is to be hoped that there will be a good turnout at this meeting.

Long before there were any bridges erected in this neighborhood across streams, regular fording places were made at intervals, from bank to bank, and could only be utilized at neap tide or low water mark. Before the Clearfield Pike was constructed, a rude worn road came up the river to this place on the left hand side of the stream. There was a good deal of foot and horseback travel, presumably because it was much easier and safer to cross a swollen waterway that way. About the time that the old and first distillery was being erected here, down where Arnold town bridge now stands, some genius conceived the idea of constructing a chain bridge, to be used by horse and man, across the river, which at that time was not so wide and deep as now. By private means funds were raised for the purchase of the right material and huge chains were bought and forged at a furnace in Huntingdon county and hauled overland to the place of construction. The links were about 14 inches in length and 2 inches in diameter. Heavy timber wharfs were built on each bank of the stream and the stringers or chains stretched across the channel and drawn taut and securely fastened. Then iron rods placed crosswise and bolted, after which planks were laid on the famous chain bridge ready for travel. It is said that this was the first and only chain bridge built east of the mountains. At the time the bridge was finished the old distillery had "made its first run" and many crossed the "chainway" as it was termed by the natives, going to the "liquor house" and thence on up the path to the village. The bridge was used by the people for many years, or until the last wooden structure was built farther up the stream on ground where the present iron bridge is located at the end of the Susquehanna House. There are very few people living today, if there are any,

who remember anything about this crude piece of architecture which proved such a boon to the early pioneer who lived on the other side of the Susquehanna. (The exact date, but as near as can be ascertained from records destroyed years ago, of this bridge's construction was about the year 1800 or 1802.)

"I'll Raise Your Salary But You've Got to Be Worth It"

Ever have the boss say that to you when you struck him for a raise? You can't expect a trained man's salary if you don't earn it. The country is short of men who know how to ship, route, classify and otherwise get goods to their destination the cheapest, quickest way possible.

Traffic Management

In this field of work there is lots of room as at the present time there are two jobs for every man fitted for the work. This is one of the new courses of instruction that the I. C. S. has added to their long list of pay-raisers and if you are looking for a position that will be more congenial; if you are looking for something that will put your pay envelope in the salary class; if you think that you are a better man than the position you now hold; drop me a line and let me explain to you how easy it will be for you to get into a higher salaried position.

Arrivals at Capital Indicate Interest In Newlands Bill

Public's Interest in Newland Probe is
Question of Government Control
and Ownership of Railroads

INVESTIGATION STARTS NEXT MONDAY

Washington, Nov. 18.—The arrival in the capital of many prominent railroad officials, financiers, economists, and representatives of commercial and industrial organizations throughout the country indicates the widespread interest that is taken in the big railroad investigation under the Newlands resolution, which is to be launched here Monday with the beginning of a series of public hearings to be conducted by the joint subcommittee of Congress appointed for that purpose.

While the joint committee's work will be distinct from that of the special commission, authorized by the Adamson law enacted to prevent the threatened railroad strike, its scope will be broad and any legislation recommended in the report to be made may include questions involved in the controversy between the roads and their employees.

The public importance that attaches to the Newlands probe, however, lies in the fact that it is the first investigation attempted in this country with a view of inquiring into the advisability of government control or government ownership of the railroads and other public utilities. For some time past rumors have been in circulation to the effect that the committee will seize the opportunity to make a thorough investigation of assets and control of the railroads to acquire the properties by purchase or condemnation proceedings.

These rumors have been strengthened by statements and interviews given out by Senator Newlands, head of the committee, who in a recent address in Chicago declared that "if government regulation fails, government ownership of railroads is inevitable. There is no other course open in settling disputes between the big employers and employees in public utilities. Government control or ownership is the question of the hour and must be faced by the people."

According to senator Newlands the plans of the committee with relation to the condition of government ownership will include a consideration of the practical results as to efficiency and economy where actually practiced; whether it is compatible with our system of government; that its effect on our institutions, and whether such a system would suit local needs. A practical method of acquiring the properties and securities of the railroads also will have to be devised, he says.

The principal questions that will confront the sub-committee are:

Whether there shall be absolute government ownership of the railroads as well as of other public utilities, such as telegraph, wireless, cable, telephone and express companies; or

Whether there shall be continued Federal regulation including requirement of Federal incorporation or control of incorporation of railroads, with increased powers given to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

One of the principal arguments against government ownership will be the claim that it will bring into politics the 1,700,000 employees, and that the efficiency of the roads when handled by the government will be less than by private hands. In answer to this the advocates of government ownership will point to the postoffice system as an instance where government control is best.

While the resolution creating the committee calls for a report to Congress on or before the second Monday in January, it is assumed that an extension of time will be granted, and plans have been made for an inquiry that may require nearly two years for its completion.

While no definite decision has been reached, it is expected to hold hearings in the principal cities of the country, as well as in Washington, New York, Chicago, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis, San Francisco, New Orleans and Atlanta. It is not expected, however, that any hearings will be held outside of Washington before the first of the year.

The committee will ask leading economists, publicists, railroad commissions, railroad executives, employes, investors, farmers, shippers, bankers, and representatives of business and industrial organizations to attend these hearings and present their opinions on the important subjects involved in the investigation.

GREETINGS FOR "BILLY" SUNDAY

Boston, Mass., Nov. 18.—Evangelist Billy Sunday, who has just concluded the first week of his great revival in Boston, is in receipt of a shower of congratulatory messages sent in anticipation of his 53rd birthday anniversary. Sunday was born at Ames, Ia., Nov. 19, 1863. Among those who have remembered him with greetings are hundreds of ministers and laymen in Omaha, Baltimore, Detroit, Pittsburgh Philadelphia, Paterson and other cities where he has conducted his remarkable evangelistic campaign during the past few years. Mr. Sunday has made no special plans for the observance of his birthday tomorrow. He expects to conduct afternoon and evening services in the big tabernacle and will pass the remainder of the day in company with his family and a few intimate friends in the spacious mansion occupied by the evangelist's party in Commonwealth avenue.

Boy Breaks Leg in Football Game Today

Rex Ammerman, Fifteen Years Old,
Is Victim of Football Accident

Rex, the fifteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Ammerman of West Fifth avenue, had a leg broken between the knee and ankle while playing football in the Clearfield Driving Park this morning.

A couple of kid teams were battling the daylight out of the pig skin in an exciting game, with young Ammerman leading the warriors on his side. He was running with the ball and when tackled by one of the opposing players went to the sod with about a dozen struggling kids on top of him. When picked up from the wreck it was found that he had received a bad fracture of the leg and he was at once taken to the Clearfield Hospital where his injury was given medical attention, and he is now getting along finely although forced to miss this afternoon's big game.

WALTER FLEGAL ON COLORADO COLLEGE 11

Making Good Record On Gridiron Says the College Tiger in a Recent Issue

HELPED WIN LAST GAME

We are glad to be able to present to our readers the likeness of Walter Flegal, who is so well and favorably known to the majority of Clearfield citizens. Walter left Clearfield over a year ago and after learning to juggle logs in the wilds of Colorado was admitted to Colorado College where he is at present a student of a preparatory course leading to the study of medicine. Incidentally Walter has developed into quite an athlete. The Colorado College Tiger, the regular weekly publication of Colorado College gives the following account of his part in the game against the Colorado Aggies: "Flegal was the most brilliant. In spite of the fact that time was taken out for him two times, he gouged and tore his way through the Farmers' lines and broke up play after play. Receiving the ball on one of the kick offs, he sped down the field shaking off tacklers right and left before he was finally downed."

Congressional Return Board Meets Here

Board Will Be Composed of One Man From Each County

The Congressional return judges for the Twenty-first district will meet in Clearfield on Tuesday, December 5th, for the purpose of canvassing the returns and completing the count of the votes cast for Congress in this district. The law specifies that these return judges shall meet to perform their duties on the Tuesday following election week, but this year on account of the soldier vote not having been received in time for tabulation the meeting was adjourned until the first Tuesday in December.

The returns thus far indicate the election of Charles H. Rowland, R., by a plurality of 168.

Your Sunday School Lesson for Tomorrow

Text of the Lesson, Acts xxviii, 11-31.
Memory Verses, 30, 31—Golden Text,
Rom. i, 16—Commentary Prepared by
Rev. D. M. Stearns.

After carrying three months at Malta another ship from Alexandria, which had wintered in the Isle, was sailing for Italy, and on that they departed and reached Italy in safety, remaining three days at Syracuse and seven days at Patroli on the way. No doubt the gospel was preached at both places, but at the latter place there were believers, and the fellowship must have been very helpful to all. It would be a great event for the brethren at Patroli to hear from those who had so recently come from Jerusalem, and to hear Paul tell of his missionary tours and release all that God had done by him and all that he had suffered on his tours at Jerusalem must have thrilled an assembly of believers and inspired them with greater zeal for God and his kingdom.

The brethren at Rome, having heard of Paul's arrival in Italy, came out to meet him as far as Appia forum and the three taverns, and, having welcomed him and encouraged him, they returned to Rome together. I sometimes use this incident as suggestively illustrative of our meeting the Lord in the air and returning with him when He shall come to set up His kingdom. Just the meeting and returning—I have no other thought of any analogy in the incident (verses 11-15). Another handful of purpose seems to have come Paul's way in his being allowed to dwell by himself with a soldier that kept him (verse 16). That soldier must have learned much of Jesus Christ, for as Paul talked to him privately it was like pouring water into a bottle rather than throwing it at a lot of bottles. Our Lord spoke more than once to audiences of one, as in the case of Nicodemus and the woman of Samaria.

Having called the chief of the Jews together, Paul explained to them why he had come to Rome as a prisoner, adding, "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain" (verses 17-20). There is only one person who is called the hope of Israel or the hope of the church, only one in whom there is any hope for either Jew or Gentile, and that is Jesus Christ, the Son of God. His coming for us is our blessed hope, and His coming with us in glory will prove Him to be the hope and Saviour of Israel as a nation (Tit. ii, 13; Isa. xxi, 5; Zech. xii, 10; xiii, 1). The brethren at Rome said that they had never heard anything against Paul, but they would like to hear what he thought of this sect that was everywhere spoken against. A day having been appointed, many came to his lodging, to whom he testified and expounded the Scriptures of Moses and the prophets concerning Jesus and the kingdom of God, from morning till evening (verses 21-23).

As they listened to him some believed, but they could not agree and had much reasoning among themselves, which led Paul to turn to the gentiles with the good news, quoting to the Jews what the Holy Spirit had said by Isaiah concerning them: "Hearken, O ye heathen, unto the Lord, for he has said, I will send my messengers, and I will make them to be received by many (Jer. i, 17; 10; Ezek. ii and iii, xxxiii, 31). The apostles also were told that they were sent out as sheep in the midst of wolves and might expect to be hated, put out of the synagogues and killed (Matt. x, 16-28; John xv, 20-21; xvi, 1-3). The most that we can aim to do in this age is by all means to save some (1 Cor. ix, 22), for we are nowhere taught that the world will ever be won to Christ until Jesus shall have received Him at His coming in glory, and then the glory of the Lord shall have risen upon Israel and shall be seen upon the nations, shall come to her light and kings to the brightness of her rising.

Paul continued to preach the kingdom of God and teach those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ for two whole years to all who came to him in his own hired house. There were many believers, even in Caesar's household, and his bonds for Christ were manifest at Caesar's court as well as elsewhere, and many of the brethren in the Lord, walking confident by his bonds, were much more bold to speak the word without fear (Phil. i, 13, 14; margin, v, 22). This book of the Acts begins with the Lord Jesus speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God during the forty days between His resurrection and ascension (Acts i, 3) and ends with the record of Paul's two years' testimony at Rome concerning the same great truth. In connection with our Lord's teaching after He rose from the dead, we need to notice what He talked about on the way to Emmaus and also that same conversation in Jerusalem (Luke xxi, 27-44) and observe that both He and Paul used the same words—the Scriptures written by the Holy Spirit through Moses and the prophets, for all Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, brought up to the full measure of the stature of the word of God (2 Tim. iii, 16; 1 Pet. i, 21).

England Indignant Over Forcing Of Belgians Into German Plants

No Action Since Execution of Edith Cavell Has Stirred England to Such Resentment.

London, Nov. 19.—(By United Press)—Further British advances in Belgium were reported by Sir Douglas Haig today. He also reported the British raid on enemy trenches north of Ypres where a number of machine guns and prisoners were stationed. England is indignant as the result of "enslavement" of Belgians by the Germans. Not since the execution of Miss Edith Cavell has there been such a feeling of resentment as that now, following reports that Belgians had been deported to make munitions and

FORTUNATE THAT FIREMEN WERE NOT NEEDED

Fire Alarm at 9:30 This Morning Due to Burning Fire on Gulish Avenue

HOSE CART TURNS TURTLE

A burning fire at the home of W. E. Davis on Gulish Ave., was the cause of "old Mooley" sounding the fire alarm at 9:30 this morning, but fortunately the services of the firemen were not needed when they arrived on the scene.

The signal was blown for District 21 and W. E. was mixed up with P. T. Davis with the result that No. 1 Company started up West Front St. toward the latter's residence and had their hose to the plug at West Walnut St. before they learned they were in wrong.

Their hose cart was hitched behind Leitzinger Bros. delivery truck and turned turtle at the turn into West Front street at the end of the bridge but was soon righted and on its way with but very little delay.

Infantile Paralysis At Dimeling Station

Station There is Afflicted.

That the freezing weather has not as yet succeeded in stamping out the germs of the dreaded infantile paralysis was demonstrated when physicians were called to attend a sick child in the family of New York Central Station Agent Stover at Erbe station, decided after a careful diagnosis that the little one was suffering from infantile paralysis.

The victim is four years of age and has been sick for several days. The attending physician is Dr. Shively, of Woodland, and he notified the local representative of the state board of health, Hon. M. L. McQuinn, that the case was really infantile paralysis and a careful quarantine will be established.

Suddenly Stricken With Pain In Abdominal Region.

County Treasurer A. L. Kline is confined to his home on Locust street seriously ill. Mr. Kline was taken sick in his office on Thursday and has suffered severely since that time. His physicians were not just sure as to the exact nature of his illness, attributing same either to gall stones or a bowel obstruction. It was feared yesterday that an operation would be necessary but the patient rallied and it is now thought he may get along without one, although his condition was not the very best today.

DuBois proposes to have a parade of Republicans tonight in honor of the Republicans carrying that city in the recent election. They may be able to parade but it will be hard to smile.

Brother Bixler is quite hard on Joe Phillips this week. It must be remembered, however, that Joe received the largest vote of any of the candidates and therefore must be the people's choice. The people rule.

The Altoona Tribune says that every time the liquor dealers exclaim that violations of the prohibitory laws are inevitable and extensive, they advertise their own willingness and intention to disregard the law.

So long as the Republicans of DuBois, Clearfield and Okeola and Houtzdale each think they are working under a separate jurisdiction or a separate dispensation, the Republican Party of Clearfield County will be doomed to defeat.

One election is no sooner over than we are pestered with another. Already there are no less than a dozen citizens, good, bad and indifferent who are laying their lines for the office of sheriff. May the saints pity us if we have to take any of those we have heard of so far.

THE OLD CHAIN BRIDGE.

Our Curwensville correspondent has the happy faculty of being able to recall old happenings around Curwensville and write them up in fine readable manner. Not a few Clearfielders find a great deal of interesting reading in the Curwensville items.

Today there is an account of the old chain bridge which was constructed near Curwensville over one hundred years ago. Those interested in the history of the olden days will do well to turn to the Curwensville letter on page three.

OHIO VALLEY EXPOSITION.

During the period of the exposition there will be held a series of conferences to consider problems relating to the further development of the Ohio Valley region.

"GEORGIA PRODUCTS DAY."

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 18—In compliance with a proclamation by Governor Harris the people throughout the length and breadth of Georgia observed today as "Georgia Products Day." In his proclamation setting aside the day the Governor urged the people to raise larger amounts and a wider variety of farm and garden products and thereby make themselves more independent in these days of high prices.

CURWENSVILLE NEWS

Forrest Vaughn was taken suddenly ill while on his way home from work on Wednesday evening.

Harry Leathers, who resides on the Bailey road, has been confined to his home most of the week with a slight illness.

Miss Lea Bloom one of Clearfield county's popular school teachers left yesterday morning for State College to attend Pennsylvania Day.

Miss Ruth Twigg, who spent the past month with friends in Philadelphia, Wilmington, Del., West Chester, and Gettysburg has returned to her home in this place.

The members of St. Timothy Catholic church are arranging for the holding of a big chicken supper in the basement of that edifice on Tuesday evening, December 12th.

Misses Esther Twigg and Mable Leonard have gone to State College where they will spend several days visiting with friends and also take in the sights and scenes of Pennsylvania day.

Paul Harvey leaves for Renovo Sunday. He has been offered a foremanship in a brick yard at that place and is going down to look the ground over and if the situation pleases him will probably accept the proposition made to him.

The entertainment held in the M. E. Church last evening under the auspices of Queen Esther Circle, was a creditable one and all who were present were well pleased and profited by the time spent in listening to the lady who entertained.

Mrs. William Twigg, Sr., has announced that the next Mothers' meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the Presbyterian church on Thursday, November 23rd, at which time "How Much should a Child know before Going to School" will be a topic discussed. It is to be hoped that there will be a good turnout at this meeting.

Long before there were any bridges erected in this neighborhood across streams, regular fording places were made at intervals, from bank to bank, and could only be utilized at neap tide or low water mark. Before the Clearfield Pike was constructed, a rude worn road came up the river to this place on the left hand side of the stream. There was a good deal of foot and horseback travel, presumably because it was much easier and safer to cross a swollen waterway that way. About the time that the old and first distillery was being erected here, down where Arnold town bridge now stands, some genius conceived the idea of constructing a chain bridge, to be used by horse and man, across the river, which at that time was not so wide and deep as now. By private means funds were raised for the purchase of the right material and huge chains were bought and forged at a furnace in Huntingdon county and hauled overland to the place of construction. The links were about 14 inches in length and 2 inches in diameter. Heavy timber wharfs were built on each bank of the stream and the stringers or chains stretched across the channel and drawn taut and securely fastened. Then iron rods placed crosswise and bolted, after which planks were laid on the famous chain bridge ready for travel. It is said that this was the first and only chain bridge built east of the mountains. At the time the bridge was finished the old distillery had "made its first run" and many crossed the "chainway" as it was termed by the natives, going to the "liquor house" and thence on up the path to the village. The bridge was used by the people for many years, or until the last wooden structure was built farther up the stream on ground where the present iron bridge is located at the end of the Susquehanna House. There are very few people living today, if there are any,
